Cactus mugs and hot chocolate -- This weird combination is a depiction of my relationship between me and my church. Peoples' judgements can be considered to be like thorns; sharp and painful. Every time I attend worship, I am convinced that people will judge my attire or how often I attend; but I am surprised that my presence is always welcomed with greetings and such. This causes warmth, like hot chocolate, to spill out and destroy my misconception of the place of worship. This is what I feel about the present church.
